c) In this scenario, the child support would be deducted from the excluded member's income first. Any remaining child support would then be deducted from the household's unearned income. If, after deducting the child support from the unearned income, any portion of the child support payment is left, it would then be deducted from the household's earned income. (MPP 63-503.442(b))

d) In this scenario, the child support for the excluded member's child would be deducted from the excluded member's income.

The child support for the non-excluded member would be deducted from the unearned income of the household first, and any remaining child support would then be deducted from the earned income of the household.

Question 2:

CDSS concurs with the requestors proposed response; the exclusion of child support paid from income consideration may vary based on factors such as which hh members (excluded or not) are responsible for paying the child support as well as which hh members (excluded or not) have earned income.
